CONSENT AND COMPLAINTS

with Chantal Patel and Jonathan Goldring

Live Event:
Learning
With Others

This event covered the types of consent obtained in practice and how they should be recorded. The realities of confirming valid consent in a disciplinary hearing were also discussed. A necessary element in consent is clear communication and the complexities of achieving this were covered.

A number of cases were discussed where a practitioner had been the subject of a complaint and subsequently acquitted. The process, timescale and potential effect on the registrant were described.

Attempting to build, or conducting, a personal relationship with a patient is a common cause of complaint and how this problem should be handled was explained.
