Evaluation, Reflection and Impact on Practice

Summary

This CPD consisted of the presentation of a number of cases which the speakers had found challenging and/or informative. In one, the practitioner had been the first to learn of a diagnosis of terminal cancer in a patient, and described the emotional stress which arose, particularly when communicating the diagnosis to the patient. Another case involved the impact that psychological stress had played in maintaining a patient's pain; dealing with that aspect dramatically resolved the problem. Also discussed were a number of cases of aortic aneurysm and their presenting features, deep vein thrombosis, abdominal mass, sudden disc prolapse and the unexpected side-effect of an otherwise successful dry-needling treatment.
