NHS MSK and Coronavirus

with Jonathan Hearsey

Summary

This discussion focussed on the nature of work within the NHS as a musculoskeletal specialist. The speaker commented that one's profession was less important than one's approach and philosophy. He also highlighted the amount which the different professions learn from each other in such a setting. The role of MSK practitioners in triage as well as treatment was discussed and the protective measures in place as a result of the coronavirus pandemic. Mechanisms to get involved with the NHS were covered.

On reflection, the main element of this discussion relevant to my own patients was that of protection from the spread of infectious disease. This was useful in developing my policy in my own clinic, with an obvious contribution to patient safety.
